WELCOME TO THE VACATION KITCHEN! PIZZA, PASTA AND MORE

The Olivenbauer invites you on a journey to the south. Enjoy with us the best recipes of the local cuisine and the great magician who enchants everything:

our first-class olive oil.

An old house, a donkey called Olivia and excellent olive oil...

Interesting facts and special features for you, dear guests:

HOMESICKNESS

For all those who are homesick for Allgäu-Swabian dishes. While wanderlust describes the desire for new experiences, homesickness leads to a longing for the safety and security of the familiar. OLIVENBAUERS THOUGHTS ON HIS VENETIAN TAVERN

In the Middle Ages, the Republic of Venice was one of the richest cities in the world at that time. A merchant fleet of 1200 large-bellied merchant ships crossed the mediterranean sea with goods from all over the world, which were handled in Venice. The German merchants, above all the Augsburg Welser and Fugger, had their own palace of the German merchants in the merchants' residential district at the Rialto bridge on the Grand Canal. There were Venetian traders who sold olive oil in large quantities to northern Europe, to Germany. Bridges (Ponte de l'Ogio), streets (Calle de l'Ogio) and squares (Fondamenta de l'Ogio) testify to the importance of the „gold of the mediterranean“ in the city. Even today, Venice with its magnificent palaces and trading houses, its huge arsenal in which the ships of the maritime power were built and maintained, seems like a city from 1001 nights. King Ludwig II. loved the oriental-byzantine architectural style so much that he had rebuilt it in the Neuschwanstein castle and on his Schachen hunting lodge...and has lost himself in this fairytale world. His friend and musical genius Richard Wagner was addicted to the beauty of this city too. He lived in Venice with his family in the Palazzo Vendramin until the end of his life. Reasons enough for the Olivenbauer to let his guests experience the culinary wealth of Venice as a gateway to the pleasures of the mediterranean. The facade is modeled on a typical Venetian street. The terrace kept as a jetty. Inside there is a byzantine hall with the Doge's council corner and the adjoining room corresponds to a captain's room in the Venice arsenal. From all seats you can enjoy a magnificent view of the Hopfensee and the Allgäu mountains. Let us, the Olivenbauer team, spoil you as your hosts!
